Some strategies have been developed in our group, with which, the tuning of regio-, diastereo- and enantio-selectivities have been realized in some transition-metal catalyzed reactions. The factors influencing the selectivities of the reactions will be discussed and some qualitative models will be proposed to rationalize the observed stereoselectivity.